

British Film Institute 21 Stephen Street, London

RSP were commissioned and tasked with creating a new mechanical and electrical services strategy and solutions for the fit out and refurbishment of BFI's existing ground and first floor areas at their London headquarters.

The existing electrical services within the ground and first floor were stripped out and replaced. The existing mechanical services installations were retained and supplemented where required.

The building was thermally modelled in order to determine internal temperatures expected within the building.

